

What are the aims and intentions of this curriculum?

The aims of our Year 10 curriculum are:

- Developing language skills: The curriculum aims to enhance students' ability to communicate effectively in spoken and written English. This includes developing vocabulary, grammar, and syntax to express ideas accurately and coherently.
- Reading comprehension: The curriculum focuses on improving students' ability to understand and analyse various forms of written texts, including fiction, non-fiction, poetry, and media sources. Students learn to extract meaning, infer information, and engage critically with the text.
- Writing proficiency: The curriculum aims to strengthen students' writing skills by encouraging them to produce clear, well-structured, and persuasive texts. Students learn different writing styles, such as narratives, persuasive essays, reports, and responses to literature.
- Oral communication: The curriculum emphasizes the development of effective oral communication skills, including listening and speaking. Students are encouraged to participate in discussions, debates, presentations, and other speaking activities to express their ideas and engage in meaningful dialogue.
- Literature appreciation: The curriculum introduces students to a range of literary works, both classic and contemporary, to foster an appreciation for literature. Students learn to analyse literary techniques, explore themes, and interpret meaning in texts.
- Critical thinking and analysis: The curriculum aims to develop students' critical thinking skills by encouraging them to analyse and evaluate information from various sources critically. They learn to identify bias, evaluate arguments, and form evidence-based opinions.
- Media literacy: In the digital age, the curriculum addresses the importance of media literacy. Students learn to critically evaluate media sources, recognize different media techniques, and understand how media influences opinions and attitudes.
- Cultural understanding: The curriculum promotes an understanding and appreciation of diverse cultures, traditions, and perspectives. Students explore texts that reflect different cultures, fostering empathy, respect, and an understanding of global issues.
- Independent learning: The curriculum encourages students to take ownership of their learning by developing research skills, independent study habits, and self-reflection. They learn to plan, organize, and manage their work effectively.
- Examination preparation: As students progress towards the end of Year 10, the curriculum may also include elements that prepare them for examinations or assessments that evaluate their English language skills and knowledge.
